

WeldWAITS is an innovative sexual risk avoidance program housed at the Weld County Department of Public Health and Environment in Greeley, Colorado. It began in 1998 and has evolved into a multi-faceted, medically accurate, culturally sensitive, and developmentally appropriate initiative. The mission of WeldWAITS is to:

- Educate teens and parents about the benefits of delayed sexual debut
- Equip them with the skills needed to develop healthy relationships and
- Empower them to realize their potential.

Over 5,000 parents and teens are reached yearly via school or community presentations, mentoring, individualized counseling, pláticas, media or large events.
